To Build, or Not to Build?

TRUSD students take sides on Auburn Dam issue

SACRAMENTO—Students from the Twin Rivers' Choices New Energy Academy at Foothill High School are debating the pros and cons of building the Auburn Dam and are turning their classroom into a campaign showcase and polling place. Both sides of the issue will be presented using student-created fliers, signs, and videos as well as live presentations.

In addition to a student body vote during the day, the classroom will be open in the evening for families and community members to cast their ballots.

This showcase serves as a rehearsal for the academy students who will take their campaign to the State Capitol on Feb. 27 and to the Partnership Academy Conference at the Sacramento Convention Center on March 3.
