They've Got Mail!

McClellan, CA—Students in Jennifer Schmidt's class in Twin Rivers Unified School District are learning they live in a much bigger world than they see from their Sacramento neighborhood. Every Thursday her 32 students get to rip into the mail they receive from throughout the United States as a direct result of their weekly letter writing commitment. Along the way, students pick up life skills like teamwork, research, writing, envelope addressing and geography.

Schmidt developed the program about five years ago and is amazed how the project seems to take on a life of its own with each new class. She even has a dedicated volunteer to help with the program—her retired father comes in every week to stuff, seal and stamp the new outgoing letters.
